

Scottish Islands Cruise 2010

This summer I have been offered a charter of the M/S Stockholm for a Scottish Islands Cruise. The Stockholm is my Svalbard ship and is a wonderful vessel, with a great captain, willing crew and awesome food. For several years they have been visiting the Scottish islands and I had planned to charter for 2011. I have always wanted to take a charter to these islands as it is the only way to experience them.

The rough itinerary is to visit many seabird colonies including Staffa, Lunga, Sanda, St Kilda plus a few others. There will be no rush and will be on each island in the best light, which you cannot do unless you are on a chartered ship. This will be a varied trip as we will not be obsessive with the photography and will be visiting some islands just for their remoteness, so we will be tourists as well as photographers. Of course we will also do some Zodiac cruises too. The cost is €4000 per person sharing, departing from Oban May 5th and returning May 15th 2010.

At the moment I am just considering this charter so am gauging serious interest. I already have 6 of my regular clients signed up so need another 6 to fill the ship. I am very picky who comes on my trips as the social side and the ships atmosphere is more important to me than any photographic prowess. I am looking for fun, balanced people who are not obsessed with their photography and who are interested in visiting these remote Scottish islands. If you want to register your interest then simply click here to send me an email and please include some details about your interests, why you want to come and anything else you think I might want to know. See you soon!
